Your impact in South Sudan

Because of your kindness, families in Panyagor, South Sudan are drinking safe water and improving sanitation and hygiene in their communities — the foundations for healthier, better futures.

31 boreholes rehabilitated or repaired to restore safe water access

30 water usage committees trained to manage and maintain boreholes

3 communal latrine groups organized (36 members, 50% women)

4 emergency latrines built with handwashing facilities

350 household latrines constructed — with more on the way

Safe, drinkable water is closer to home. Children no longer spend hours walking and waiting for water, and families face reduced risk of waterborne disease. Improved sanitation is restoring dignity, safety and health, especially for women and girls.

In South Sudanese Dinka, “yin ca leec” means thank you. This heartfelt thanks is shared with you from the people whose lives you are changing.
